Can we harness the wind as energy source?

By CARROLL WILSON

When the wind whistles through cracks around the warped window in Vaughn Nelson's office, he hears not an annoyance but what could prove to be a major source of energy for crisis-ridden Americans.

The wind, the source of power which turned the Texas Panhandle from a lonesome range into the cattle capital of the world, could provide the energy to keep people and cattle on that range.

With a much-publicized and ever-threatening shortage of fuel energy to operate the cars, electric lights and gas stoves of the country's population, Vaughn Nelson, head of the West Texas State University physics department, is one of many scientists in America looking at alternate energy sources.

Nelson is, figuratively, eyeing the wind for exactly that purpose.

Years ago, back during the 1930s particularly, farmers on the high plains used windmills to feed current into dry cell batteries for storage and subsequent use in lighting their homes.

The practice fell into disuse, however, and widespread use of the wind, although attempted many times in many parts of the world, has never been put to use seriously to supply energy.

Nelson, who is collaborating with Dr. Earl Gilmore, head of the physical sciences department at Amarillo College, on a project to study wind characteristics in the Panhandle, has been invited to deliver a paper at a Wind Energy Conversion Systems Workshop in mid-June in Washington, D.C.

The workshop, sponsored by the National Science Foundation and the National Aeronautics and Space Administration, is designed to bring together scientists from throughout the world who are exploring the conversion of wind energy into electrical energy to meet the needs of a nation faced with dwindling power sources.

Nelson will present a paper outlining why a wind characteristics study should be undertaken in the Panhandle area.

In preliminary studies in this area, Nelson says statistics show that the Panhandle and mid-Plains portion of the country are prime locations for wind conversion systems.

"This region has one of the highest wind velocity averages in the nation, which everybody knows," Nelson said.

It is with this in mind that Nelson and Gilmore have researched the possibilities of wind conversion.

Nelson said much work on converting wind energy into power has been done in countries outside the United States, primarily because the U.S. has for years been fortunate enough to have an ample and cheap energy supply.

With that supply threatened, scientists in the U.S. have begun studying the wind with an eye toward harnessing its power to produce power to run factories and homes.

Nelson said the idea is not really new. During the 1930s particularly in the Midwest, farmers raised wind chargers which stored electrical power for farmhouse use.

"My dad had one in Kansas back in the '30s," he said. "We just used it for lights essentially."

Nelson said those early wind chargers proved to be less than successful, primarily because the cost involved couldn't compete economically with rural electric cooperatives in electricity.

The idea now, says Nelson, is to use the wind to directly produce electricity or to produce energy to make hydrogen which could then be used as a fuel.

Most scientists, though, are studying wind conversion with an eye to directly producing electricity.

One scientist, for example, has proposed that giant windmills be constructed on the world's oceans to harness winds.

In Denmark, windmills are used to generate electricity which ultimately goes into their national power system.

Experimentation in the U.S. on a large scale has been limited to a project in the Northwest which cost about $2.5 million and which ultimately ended in collapse.

The advantages of the wind as a power or energy source are obvious, Nelson says.

Could a windmill for each home become a new concept in providing energy? West Texas State University physicist Vaughn Nelson says the idea is not beyond possibility.

Watkins named president, sets enrollment top priority

By DOTTY GRIFFITH
Special Correspondent

DALLAS—Dr. Lloyd Watkins, 44, president of the Iowa Association of Private Colleges and Universities, was named president of West Texas State University Saturday by the university's board of regents.

The board met behind closed doors for 3½ hours before announcing Watkins' appointment.

Two other candidates for the position, Dr. Bill Miller, director of higher education at North Texas State University, and Dr. Leon S. Pope, association dean of agriculture at Texas A&M University, appeared before the board for an hour each.

Watkins was not able to attend the meeting because he recently underwent an ear operation which prevented him from traveling.

A fourth candidate for the position, Dr. T. Paige Carruth, vice president of Student Affairs at West Texas, was not at the meeting. No reason was given.

Board Chairman Cloyce K. Box of Dallas said the vote on Watkins was unanimous, however, an unnamed board member confided that the discussions were heated and the final vote was close.

Pope appeared before the board initially beginning at 3 p.m. and was followed almost immediately by Miller.

They deliberated 45 minutes before announcing the decision.

Eight board members were present at the meeting except Wayne Owen of Lubbock.

Owen, WTSU's newest regent, was absent at last week's meeting where the stage was set for this week's action.

The board last week promoted Dr. James P. Cornette to chancellor of the university. Dr. Cornette has been at WTSU since 1948.

Dr. Watkins, contacted at home late Saturday, said he is elated at the news of his appointment.

He said his first priority is to come to Canyon and find a home.

Dr. Watkins told The News Saturday evening he believes a top priority when he arrives on campus will be to examine student enrollment to come up with ways to boost enrollment.

WTSU has consistently lost student enrollment since 1969, when it peaked at just under 8000.

Last fall student enrollment was 6500.

He said he will come to the city about August 1.

"I'm elated, pleased and a little stunned," he said. "I'm very happy and I'm looking forward to working with all of you."

Dr. Watkins said he believes WTSU "has everything going for it and I'm just delighted."

He said he must sell his home in Iowa and find another in Canyon and the board, realizing that, gave him two months to take the reign of the university.

Asked about what his relationship will be as president to now Chancellor Cornette, Dr. Watkins said he looks forward to working with Dr. Cornette.

He said he anticipated his first few months at the university will be spent becoming acclimated to the university and the personnel there.

"Much of the time in the first few months of any new president job involves orientation and I don't want to rush in like a bull in a china closet without knowing the situation," he said.

In a prepared release following their Saturday meeting, the regents pledged their full support in Watkins and said they expect him to make an orderly transition into the job as chief executive.

Dr. Cornette's appointment as chancellor is until February of 1974 and Box said last week he does not yet know how long it will be before a full transition of the position will be affected.

Dr. Watkins during a visit to the WTSU campus in late May along with the other three candidates for the presidency said he feels the biggest failing of higher education in this country has been a lack of vision and a lack of providing programs and courses to meet the needs of students.

He sees the role of the president as one who predicts future trends and prepares the university to meet the future with new and challenging programs.

He has mentioned in several interviews with news media the need for a university to broaden its perspective and offer programs for students of all ages. He said another major failing of universities has been the narrow definition of a student.

Dr. Watkins says he sees a student as anyone who comes to the campus to learn.

Dr. Watkins told reporters in May that he spends 50 per cent of his time at his Iowa job working with state legislators and the

1972 audit due airing by county

An audit of the 1972 books of Randall County, which reveals a fund balance of $408,000, will be reviewed by county commissioners Monday with Auditor Bill Francis.

The audit, prepared by Doshier, Pickens and Francis of Amarillo, indicates the county began their 1972 fiscal year with a fund balance from 1971 of more than $350,000.

Receipts during 1972 totalled $1.14 million and disbursements totalled $1.06 million.

The audit shows that the county purchased $59,887 worth of new equipment during 1972, including $20,000 worth for the sheriff's office, and $28,000 worth for the road and bridge department.

For salaries and office equipment, the audit shows totals of Land annexation to be eyed Tues.

Randall County commissioners and members of the county board of school trustees have been invited to attend a Tuesday night joint meeting between Canyon and Amarillo school board members to discuss possible annexation by the Amarillo district of land now in the Canyon district.

In letters signed by Dr. Jeff Moore, president of the Amarillo school board, county commissioners and County Judge Woody Pond have been invited to the meeting.

County school trustees also received invitations to the meeting, which will be at 8:30 p.m. Tuesday at the Amarillo school administration building.

The letters state that the discussion of the possible annexation "is of vital concern to the future growth of the city of Amarillo and Randall County."

Several Canyon school board members have previously met with members of the Amarillo board to discuss the annexation of several sections of land just south of the current Amarillo-Canyon district line in North Randall County.

Canyon board members have expressed reluctance to go along with the Amarillo proposal.

County school trustees, while they have discussed the proposed annexation during several recent sessions, have expressed no opinion.

It is known, however, that at

Fuel shortage publicity could destroy tourism

Continued publicity about a fuel shortage in this country could prove disastrous to tourism, Canyon Chamber of Commerce President Raymond Raillard warned last week.

"If the publicity keeps up, they're going to have a surplus but people aren't going to travel," he said.

"It could sure hurt tourism," said Chamber manager Roland Black.

Raillard is concerned that tourism, which puts millions of dollars in Canyon merchants' coffers annually, will be decreased to a great extent by continued talk and press stories about the shortage of gasoline and other fuels.

"If the publicity keeps up and continues scaring people, a lot of people would stay closer to home this summer," he said. "I don't know what it would do to us."

Raillard referred to articles not only in The Canyon News but in other publications throughout the country noting the shortage of gasoline for gas station sales use.

He said he feels the publicity might well slow tourism, which Canyon is and has been grooming for several years.

Raillard, both as chamber president and as manager of the musical-drama "TEXAS" has particular interest in tourist trade.

He said the Canyon area takes in about $6 million per year through tourist trade.

And, he noted that about 70 per cent of the persons who come to Canyon during the summer months to view the musical "TEXAS" in Palo Duro Canyon come from more than 100 miles from the city.

It is those people he's worried about.

He said 82,000 persons watched the musical last summer and came in 18,000 cars.

Black produced figures which indicate 40,000 persons visited the Panhandle-Plains Historical Museum last year and 184,000 persons in cars visited Palo Duro Canyon State Park.

The tourist season has just begun for Canyon and will hit full stride when the production in Palo Duro Canyon starts later this month.

Raillard said Canyon is better equipped than ever before to handle the tourist trade this summer.

A new motel, new restaurant will add tourist dollars to the local economy, he said.

And, the reopening of Buffalo Lake west of Canyon will also bring tourists to the area.

In addition, "TEXAS" draws larger and larger crowds each year, as does Palo Duro Canyon and the Canyon museum.

Although the apparent beneficiaries of tourism in Canyon are merchants along the highways here, Black noted that indirectly the tourist dollar puts money in merchants pockets all over town.

He said a tourist dollar is estimated to turn over seven times in a town.

Poff not happy with legislature

State Rep. Bryan Poff returned to the Panhandle from Austin Thursday and said he is dissatisfied with the performance of the Texas Legislature which closed out this year's session last Monday.

"I wasn't that impressed," Poff said. "We put out a lot of work and didn't get a whole lot done as far as I'm concerned.

"The governor and the speaker said they thought we did great work. I guess it's just how you look at it."

Poff said he was not satisfied with the legislature's accomplishments and laid much of the blame on Speaker of the House Price Daniel Jr.

"We had no leadership in the House," he said. "The speaker spent a lot of his time fighting with the lieutenant governor rather than with running the House.

Poff told The News earlier last week his legislation didn't fare too well in Austin.

His bill to locate a veterinary diagnostic laboratory on the campus of West Texas State University met opposition in the Senate, which turned out a compromise bill calling for construction of the lab in either Potter or Randall counties.

A bill which would have exempted cattle feedyards from Texas scabies regulations also met defeat and Poff laid the

Finances slim for new hospital

Planners of Canyon's new 50-bed hospital, who are prepared to pay $1.6 million for the structure, may find they have virtually no cushion in their finances.

Architect Bill O'Connell of Austin told South Randall County Hospital board members Thursday night he estimates the construction of the hospital could cost $1,664 million. That would be $64,000 over the anticipated cost.

O'Connell, who brought more plans to show hospital board members, said the figure includes all fees and costs, and breaks down to a cost of about $32 per square foot for the hospital construction.

The Austin architect, who for nearly a year has been working on the plans for the new hospital, said he bases his estimated costs on a cost analysis by a Fort Worth firm and on a recent hospital project cost in Rio Grande City.

"Right this minute, we're not too far off what we're talking about," he said.

O'Connell said he expects good bids from Amarillo and area construction firms, which he characterized as eager to get new construction jobs.

The architect said he expects final plans and specifications will be ready to submit to prospective bidders later this month with bids to be let around July 15.

Construction is expected to take about a year.

Hospital board members and three Canyon doctors went over O'Connell's plans Thursday night with a fine-tooth comb, discussing everything from electrical systems to window screens.

The board also approved the payment of $78,000 for bonds purchased to finance $800,000 of the construction project.

In outlining what is contained in the hospital, O'Connell noted that a doctor's clinic portion of the hospital will not be completed and will have no internal partitions or flooring.

It is anticipated that doctors will finance the remodeling of the clinic to suit their own tastes.

His plans specify that vinyl-asbestos floor tile will be used throughout the hospital.

Board members discussed the possibility of using carpet rather than tile.

O'Connell said that before bids

Marriages up here, divorces down in May

The cliche that in the spring a young man's fancy turns to thoughts of love is just about true, statistically, in Randall County.

Whether by a quirk of nature or the actualization of the cliche, statistics in the Randall County courthouse indicate May was a month of unusual serenity.

County Clerk LeRoy Hutton reports that an all-time record number of marriage licenses were issued by his office during May.

The number of divorces filed in the district clerk's office reached an all-time low for the year during May.

And, sheriff's deputies report an unusually low number of arrests.

"Something must be in the water," Hutton said Friday. "We set an all-time record in the issuance of marriage licenses."

Through Thursday afternoon, 43 couples had applied for marriage licenses in the county.

May is always a big month for marriage licenses according to Hutton's statistics but this year, the young lovers outdid themselves.

Hutton's statistics show that 1965 was a bad year for marriage licenses in May with only nine issued.

Forty-one marriage licenses were issued in 1967, but Hutton says that was due primarily to factors other than a young man's fancy.

"In 1967, we had some publicity on the fact that Potter County was selling licenses for $5 and we were selling them for $3," Hutton said.

The publicity came just before May of that year and Hutton attributed the cut-rate price to the increased number of licenses issued.

Couples may obtain marriage licenses in any county in the state.

Now, of course, Hutton

Registration Mon. for WTSU summer

About 2800 persons are expected to begin registration Monday for summer classes at West Texas State University.

Classes begin Tuesday and the first summer session ends July 12.

Beginning freshmen will be required to attend an orientation and counselling session at 8:30 a.m. Monday in the University Complex South, room 101.

Course offerings for the first semester of summer school include several new courses.

The Department of Mathematics will offer Math 091, basic math, for students who wish to improve their scores on the math portion of the Graduate Record Examination.

A workshop in career education for elementary and secondary school teachers, Industrial Education 1062, will expose the teacher to basic job clusters and activities typical of employees in the career areas.

Public relations and publicity will be offered by the Journalism Department. Journalism 1301 will cover the study of public relations principles, publics, atti-

American Family Is Under Attack

By ANN BROWN

The American family is under attack, and the key battleground is the college campus. There are professors in almost every state college who advocate "free love" because "marriage and the family are passe."

Prof. Carlfred B. Broderick of the U. of Southern Cal. is editor of "The Journal of Marriage and the Family." He reviews practically all of the books published in this field.

Broderick says "publishers are knocking themselves out to print books that predict marriage is finished, and offer 'alternatives to marriage and the family.' "

According to the publishers, these books are required reading on hundreds of college campuses.

Prof. Gerhard Neubeck of the U. of Minnesota, an "expert" on polygamy, foresees a "new era" when "it is taken for granted that both men and women want variety in their relationships." He disparages the archaic idea that "one could love only one person at a time."

"The Family in Transition" which is required reading on over 100 campuses advocates "mate swapping" as an "activity" which "could consolidate the marriage." (?)

Penn State U. at State College, Pa., offers a course called "Alternatives to Marriage," taught by Carl A. Ridley, Jr., and Stella Goldberg.

According to Prof. Ridley the course discusses mate swapping, group marriages, and "young people's communes in which the members are free to have access to each other."

To accept the fact that these deviations exist in the American subculture is one thing, but they are being presented as workable or even desirable alternatives to traditional family patterns.

Ridley and Goldberg admitted there has been "no really solid research evidence to tell us how the 'Alternatives to Marriage' work." Both confessed they "relied heavily" on fiction for the teaching materials for their course.

Prof. Judith Laws at Cornell defended her attack on the family with the "facts" that the "bulk of marriages are not successful," and that "men dominate."

According to a student poll conducted by Daniel Yankelovich, Inc., the number of students who believe marriage is obsolete increased from 24 percent in 1969 to 34 percent in 1971.

Could it be coincidental that 1 out of 3 students believes marriage is obsolete, and 1 out of 3 marriages ends in divorce?

But does our tragic divorce rate prove that marriage is outmoded? America also has the highest marriage rate in the world.

As a rule, the person who contemplates divorce immediately thinks of remarriage. The number of divorced women who remarry increased 40 percent during the last decade, according to U.S. census reports. The rate for men is even higher. Is it marriage or maturity that is becoming obsolete?

All of us act according to our convictions. The success of any venture largely depends on self discipline, self sacrifice, and sheer will power. Anyone who believes marriage is sacred, and is determined to make his a success is likely to do so. BEING the right person is more important than marrying the right person.

The home is earth's oldest institution. It has always been a haven and a refuge from the storms and stresses of life.

Even the emotionally immature, unstable partner who is unwilling to try to keep one marriage together is usually eager to marry again.

No marriage is perfect. But any couple willing to put God first in their lives can create a good home. Even one humble, God-fearing partner can usually keep the home together — especially if it is the wife.

There is little doubt that radical professors with their contempt for the sanctity of marriage are damaging the fabric of the society that supports them.

Immorality, however, is as old as the human race. But home and family is still a harbor few Americans seem to feel they can live without.

The home, like the anvil, will likely survive all the hammers.

Problem Is Discipline

Dear Troy,

Our problem seems to be that we live in an eighteenth century county, with a nineteenth century bureaucracy. How many of us have the discipline to tax ourself for the service we need and help weed out the one we don't? Until we are willing to dedicate ourselves to the task at hand, I am afraid the taxpayer will continue to be used and misused.

Thank you,

To Annex Or Not

By CARROLL WILSON

Several months ago, the word was out that a petition was being prepared in the north part of the Canyon Independent School District asking that several sections of property be annexed into the Amarillo district.

After a good deal of calling around, we printed a story outlining the basic facts involved.

The new Amarillo High School, which is scheduled to open for classes this fall, is located, of course, on a tract of land just north of the north Canyon district line.

Several land developers own and plan to build houses on land near the new Amarillo school.

The trouble has been, though, that the land just to the south of the new school is not in the Amarillo school district. It is in the Canyon district.

Apparently, the developers feel that the fact the land is in the Canyon district—and therefore that the potential home-buyer with children might be hesitant to buy a home under circumstances where the children would be bused to Canyon to attend school—has made their property less attractive to home buyers.

It was revealed in the News story several months ago that there is a distinct possibility several of those developers are very anxious to have their property annexed by the Amarillo district.

A petition to either school board, however, has never materialized.

Robert Ashworth, superintendent of Amarillo schools, minimized the petition effort when he talked with a News reporter for that initial story.

Ashworth passed the effort off as a once-a-year occurrence.

Behind the scenes, though, Amarillo school board members were having chats with members of the Randall County Board of School Trustees about the possibility of annexation.

These chats were more-or-less feelers—to see what the county school board members thought of the possibility of annexation.

It was obvious then—and it has become distinctly clear now—that the efforts by Amarillo to annex the CISD property was more than just a once-a-year happening.

Amarillo school officials are highly interested in annexing the property—with or without a petition from the concerned property owners.

After all, no petition has been presented, yet Amarillo school board members have pressed the Canyon board to come to Amarillo and talk over the annexation.

It is clear, then, that Amarillo wants the land.

The school officials have implied publicly that if the several sections are not annexed into the Amarillo district, Amarillo will cease to grow to the south. Since Amarillo is only growing to the south, this alarmist implication naturally excites Amarilloans who are champing at the bit to grow, Grow, GROW.

The implication is hardly more than a propaganda technique to stir up Amarillo.

Because, it is certainly not based on fact.

The many, many sections of land between Canyon and Amarillo have in just the past few years sprouted housing developments and mobile home developments and the children from all these developments come to Canyon for schooling.

There has been no rage of protest about this situation and it certainly has not hampered growth in the county area between the two cities.

Amarillo school officials apparently had their current effort toward annexation in mind some time ago. They did, after all, presumably have their eyes open when they purchased the land that Amarillo High School now sits on. They knew good and well that the land to the south of them was in the Canyon School District.

And, yet, they purchased it. Could it be that all along they had in mind trying to annex the Canyon School District land?

I think that's a safe assumption.

If the assumption is correct, the attitude of the Amarillo school board is indicative of the kind of arrogance which Amarillo must shed if it ever hopes to be a real Panhandle leader.

For years, Amarillo has been—not like Chicago, as described by Carl Sandburg, the hog butcher of the country—but the hog of the Panhandle.

It is true and has been true that Amarillo supports the small towns in the Panhandle if it behooves Amarillo's self-interest.

Amarillo's ego was lowered a notch or two with the census of 1970, but the return to a semblance of humility was only temporary.

Now, new industry is coming to Amarillo and with an appetite which is unquenchable, Amarillo is reaching out for more.

If Canyon school board members agree to allow Amarillo to annex the few sections of land, where will the annexation stop?

The appetite will not be sated and the Amarillo district will seek again and again to bite off and swallow more and more of the Canyon district.

Frankly, that Amarillo should want to take over as much of the Canyon district as possible is only logical.

Amarillo is growing to the south.

But, it is also only logical that the Canyon district should keep the district boundaries as they now are.

And, since we've been talking about self-interest, it is very much in the local district's self-interest that the boundaries remain, precisely for the same reasons that it is in Amarillo's self-interest for the boundaries to be changed.

Actually, the recent announcement that the Canyon district purchased a large tract of land in the north part of the county for a high school site should eliminate any ruffled feathers of folks who might want to settle in the north part of the district but don't want their kids to have to travel 15 miles to and from school.

So far, the Canyon school board has indicated it is not too interested in the Amarillo proposal. I hope the proposal dies due to that disinterest.

If it does not, we can count on seeing in the not too distant future Canyon surrounded by Amarillo and the Canyon schools reduced to very little more than extensions of the Amarillo district.

As Amarillo encroaches into the Canyon district, Canyon board members will obviously be faced with the problem of maintaining the current excellent academic standards of the Canyon schools with an increasingly limited budget.

Thus, Canyon excellence will hurt—and the education of your son and daughter and mine will become secondary to the lust for growth of Amarillo.

We simply can't let this happen.

Kudos to the administrative council at West Texas State University for voting last week to donate their next fall raises to the student scholarship fund.

Scholarships at WTSU have been few and far between for students who excelled in academics in the past.

Just last week, a student who maintained a straight A average at Amarillo College was told by a department head at WTSU that he had to be either poor or a minority group member to obtain a scholarship.

Frankly, it boosted my optimism level by 100 per cent to see that the WTSU administrators are paying more than lip-service to the idea that they must recruit students to the university.

By donating their raises to scholarships, the administrators have shown they are really concerned with the plight of the university and are serious about making some changes to help the university.

My congratulations for a wise decision and my thanks to them.

Work Program Response Good

Almost 20 youngsters have signed up to seek summer employment under a federally-financed program and just about that many non-profit organizations here have said they would like to hire them.

Judge Woody Pond said Friday he has taken applications from about 18 youngsters who want to work under a federal program which funds six weeks of summer work for disadvantaged youths, Vietnam-era veterans and youths out of school for the summer.

"We've had a terrific response," he said.

Pond said he is talking with Amarillo officials to obtain 17 slots for workers in Canyon this summer. Currently, the city is allowed to employ only 12 persons through the federal program.

The program pays $1.60 per hour for the youths to work in non-profit organizations.

Pastor Donates Church Volumes

The Rev. J. Frank Peery, pastor of the First United Methodist Church here, presented recently more than 700 volumes to the church library.

The Rev. Mr. Peery, who said he has a personal library of more than 3000 volumes, made the gift to Ada V. Clark, church librarian.

He said most of the books donated are religious in nature and are concerned with theology, Bible studies, marriage, counselling and others.

"We have probably one of the best church libraries in this area," The Rev. Mr. Peery said. "We try to add 100 new books each year."

He said the library is well used by church members, Sunday school teachers, and students.

The pastor said he stipulated in making the 700-volume gift that books not used in the church library should be donated the City of Canyon library, the West Texas State University library or the library of King's Manor, the Methodist home for senior citizens in Hereford.

Vaulter Signs With WT

A second standout pole vaulter has signed an athletic scholarship agreement with West Texas State University track coach Bob Kitchens.

Tommy Humphries of Odessa Permian High School is the second 15-foot pole vaulter to be signed this spring. Mark Walker of Seminole, who has been vaulting for New Mexico Junior College in Hobbs, N.M., is the other vaulter who has cleared the 15-foot mark.

Humphries placed fourth in the Class AAAA division of the state high school meet earlier this month at Austin.

The 5-11, 155-pounder vaulted 13-0 as a sophomore, 14-3 as a junior and cleared the 15-0 mark this past spring. He cleared 13-0 in the final meet of his sophomore year. He won his district as a junior and placed third in the regional meet.

This past spring Humphries won his district with a vault of 14-3. He captured the regional title with a 14-0 effort.

The son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Humphries started vaulting in the seventh grade. A National Honor Society student, he plans to major in business.

"A vaulter coming out of high school should be able to add two feet to his best height," said Kitchens. "That makes Tommy a potential 17-foot vaulter."

Arts And Entertainment Through The Looking Glass

By ANN MELIN

IN ONE OF her most dowdy moments, Queen Victoria once regally proclaimed that she found levity "not amusing." As a specialty amusements reporter for three years, I can identify a bit with Her Majesty's sentiment. For all those lumped under what newspapers categorize as "Amusements" — artists, musicians, ballerinas, actors and many others — arts and entertainment is dead serious business.

An Amusements reporter and reviewer is therefore an anomalous creature, poised precariously between what artistes call "workaday America" and what the latter calls "culture hounds." Since one group counts upon the other for its patronage, and the other for its diversion, the reporter's task is to act as courier between the two. But as a reviewer and critic, his job is, as Judith Crist so bravely pronounced it, "to call the shots as I see them—maybe you'll like them and maybe you won't."

This gutsy intention doesn't always work out in practice, however. Sometimes a reviewer can call a shot wrong. My first review for a city newspaper was a raving one, more or less, for "Easy Rider," that youth cult film of an American odyssey by two hip motorcyclists. I was 19 years old at the time, inflamed with idealism and wanderlust. At a mellow 22, I'd have to say I wouldn't pay the price of admission to see that one again.

SOMETIMES, TOO, I'VE cowered like a scared rabbit in the face of a would-be routine review turned hot news. During what Time magazine is wont to call "the turbulent sixties" I had to cover several rock concerts which came near to turning police reporter stuff, as rock idols intoned revolutionary slogans and crowds pushed ominously against policemen armed with night sticks. Amidst the wild din of ear-splitting, high-decibel music, there was one young reporter earnestly praying for crowd and singers to kindly cool it so I wouldn't be up till three in the morning trying to figure out where the "alleged's" went in a police news story.

At still another concert, the main attraction failed to appear at the 8 p.m. showtime, and didn't mount the platform until after midnight. Writing the story the next day, my phone rang several times with leary parents on the other end, inquiring as to whether that concert last night REALLY wasn't over until the wee hours of the morning as Junior said it wasn't.

AND SOMETIMES IT hurt to be in my position. Like when I got several really virulent letters from little girls in Amarillo who were crushed at my callous treatment of their idol, Bobby Sherman. In my review, I had stated that although the phenomena of hair-tearing and screaming was the same for Sherman as it was for Sinatra, Presley, the Beatles and Rolling Stone Mick Jagger, that Mr. Sherman had much less real talent behind his appeal. To this, one outraged youngster informed me that "WE have better taste now then they had back then.", and that my review was "written from the point of view of the older generation." I felt suddenly old. I considered a reply, but scanning my tresses for gray hairs and finding none, I wondered what I could say, after all.

In my see-and-report capacity, I've encountered considerably less static, absorbed much more culture, and have had a lot of fun. I've toured Palo Duro Canyon with a troupe of French actors awing at its rugged splendour and murmuring "extraordinaire"—and it was like seeing the familiar canyon for the first time. I've interviewed gospel singers and Russian prima ballerinas, flamenco guitarists with only the most rudimentary knowledge of English, champion ice skaters and symphony harpists, and artists with mediums ranging from everything from oil to nuts and bolts, painting everything from abstract "field paintings" to familiar Panhandle landscapes.

ALL THIS BRINGS us to the circus. Mingling with so many people of so many different talents, leading so many exciting lives, I've often wanted to quit writing about them and start living like them. Never was this dream so strong as when I sat on the "pie wagon" (a train dining car) of the Ringling Brothers, Barnum & Bailey Circus chatting with a juggler named Fudi and his petite blond wife (a tight-rope walker herself).

The pie wagon bustled with circus world excitement, as clowns and lion-tamers, aerialists and roustabouts clamored for their dinners. It was at that moment, that I considered running away with the circus. Only a fleeting idea, mind you, and a quixotic one as well because I possessed none of the circus people's strange talents.

But I decided to stick with this business. And that's why I'm here, about to embark on a column designed to try in small part to convey the large amount of excitement, enrichment and love that goes into the wonderful world of arts and entertainment.

The bridegroom graduated from Canyon High School in 1972, attended Amarillo College and is presently employed with Ric Edmondson Building Contractors in Canyon.

A prenuptial shower was held May 17 in the home of Miss Debbie Patton, 2107 13th Ave., with about 30 guests present. Cohostesses were Misses Cindy Johnston, Dede Johnston and Jan Johnston and Mesdames C.A. Dodson, A.T. Reese, Kenneth Clark, Ovel Gray, Dwight Davis and Ric Edmondson.

The rehearsal was held the evening of May 31, following a rehearsal buffet at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Lewis, sister of the bridegroom, at 707 Taylor Lane, Canyon. The buffet was given by the bridegroom's parents.

Happy's Only Physician Ends 34-Year Practice With Retirement

Dr. G.L. Robinson, Happy physician, answered a desperate call from a Depression-ridden Happy 34 years ago. He's stuck with his patient ever since, delivering its babies, treating its ailments and saving its lives.

Retiring now from his position as sole doctor in Happy, Dr. Robinson can look back on a career that would make Hippocrates proud. But not without a certain element of regret. There is no replacement for Dr. Robinson, only proving that he is one of the last of that rare breed—the country doctor.

Dr. Robinson, 60, says he wishes he could remain in practice but that his health prevents it. "Sometimes a physician can't heal himself," he says, "and I've always taken that old saying to mean that the doctor should see to righting his own wrongs before he goes advising others."

Growing up during hard times in McCook, Neb. during the Depression, Dr. Robinson was early inspired by a local doctor to enter the medical profession. After graduating from high school and after an unsuccesstul attempt to secure a farm in that area, he went to school, attending college first at a small institution in McCook, and later enrolling at the Kansas City College of Osteopathic Medicine.

After graduation Dr. Robinson came to Amarillo to study under a noted physician there. January, 1939 found him looking for a place to practice. Then he found Happy, a Dust Bowl town whose people were having trouble maintaining a doctor because of their inability to pay their bills.

Dr. Robinson sees the future of country doctoring as "very poor. "All the small towns in the area are facing the problem of not being able to get doctors," he says, "The bigger cities have so many better facilities and so many other attractions that the small towns cannot compete."

When asked why he decided to be a country doctor, he replied with a terse "Because I wanted to."

In addition to being Happy's only doctor, Dr. Robinson has served in various other capacities in the community. He was the town's mayor for 13 years, president of the Lion's Club there, a scoutmaster, and physician for the town's high school athletic teams.

In 1963 he was recipient of the General Practitioner of the Year Award of the Texas Society of Osteopathic Physicians and Surgeons, and in 1968 an appreciative Happy honored him with the first Citizen of the Year Award ever to be presented in the town.

Although he thinks medicine has gained from the gigantic scientific leaps and bounds it has made particularly since World War II, Dr. Robinson laments the passing of the old intimate patient-doctor relationship.

"I know all my patients and their families. I've delivered their babies and repeated on them in the next generation. In a small town you feel closer to your people.

"Things have been changing in larger towns to where doctors don't have time to visit with their patients and their families. The increase in specialization also means the decline in the number of family doctors acquainted with the patient's life history."

Dr. Robinson takes television's doctor-ideal, Marcus Welby, very seriously. "I think he's great," Dr. Robinson says, "He's a very kind man and seems to love the people he treats... and to care about them."

Asked what advice he would render a young doctor should one decide to set out his sign in now doctor-less Happy, he replied, simply, "I'd tell him to take care of his people."

Chamber Board To Meet Mon.

Plans for the annual Canyon Days Celebration scheduled later this month and in early July will continue Monday night when board members of the Canyon Chamber of Commerce meet.

The meeting is at 7:30 p.m. in the community center.

Gene Glazener and Cordell Huddleston are due to report on plans for the Canyon Days parade, Woody Pond is to report on the noon barbecue and Cary Magness is to report on the July 4 fireworks display.

Board members are also expected to discuss the possible location of the Texas A&M Veterinary Diagnostic Laboratory, which originally was to be built on the West Texas State University campus. A bill creating the lab passed the legislature recently but called for construction anywhere in Potter or Randall counties.

David West is expected to report on the status of the Parade of Homes scheduled in July here.

President Raymond Raillard is expected to tell board members about the brochure produced to boost Canyon tourism by the Board of City Development. He is scheduled also to unfold plans by the Board of City Development to produce a tabloid-type information guide for tourists.

Keeling Wins Farm Award

A spring graduate of Canyon High School, Scottie Keeling, was recently named winner of the 1972 DeKalb Agricultural Accomplishment Award.

Keeling, son of Mr. and Mrs. Tom Keeling of Canyon, was presented the award as the outstanding senior in vocational agriculture at CHS. He was chosen for the award on the basis of scholarship, leadership, and supervised farming program.

The award is sponsored by DeKalb AgResearch, Inc.

At CHS, Keeling was president of the Future Farmers of America chapter. His agriculture program consisted of angus cattle and crops.

Keeling plans to attend West Texas State University next fall.

As a winner of the DeKalb award, his name will be inscribed on a special honors plaque provided by the company.

Mullis was killed on the parking lot of Betty's Cafe in south Amarillo in the early morning hours Nov. 8.

Dist. Atty. George Dowlen said he expects the trial to continue through Wednesday here.

Bob McClendon, assistant Dist. Atty., will be prosecutor for the case and H. Harris Hampton will be defense attorney.

Selection of jury is expected to take up most of the morning Monday.

No Replacement Yet on Plaque

With tourist season just beginning, the Randall County Historical Survey Committee is still waiting before ordering another plaque telling motorists of the feast of the first Thanksgiving which was mounted beside the state highway leading to Palo Duro Canyon.

County Judge Woody Pond said the large plaque was stolen last winter and has not been returned.

"To this date we have not found them," he said. "I think if the people who have them would return them there'd probably not be too many questions asked."

Pond noted that the plaque, which was stolen one night along with two other historical markers, is expensive to replace and the waiting period for replacements is lengthy.

The Thanksgiving plaque told passersby of the Thanksgiving celebrated by Coronado and his men 79 years before the Pilgrims came to this country.

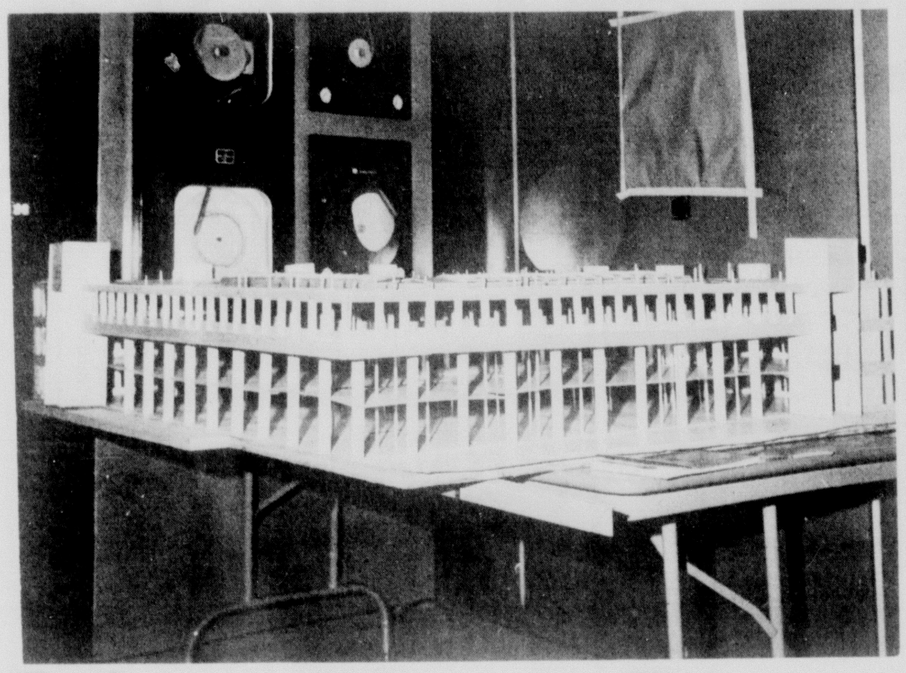
For entertainment and "serenity of mind," Dr. John Cranston, West Texas State University history professor, likes to build models, like this one of the new Science Building, executed in balsa wood, celluloid, drinking straws, plywood and "anything I could find." He says his colleagues have pronounced it "a pretty good likeness" and Dr. Gene Crowder, chemistry department head, figured the work to be built on a scale of about 1 to 30. The model is now on display next to the Environmental Chamber in Killgore Research Center.



Annex. . .

least one county trustee, Charles Purcell, campaigned for office in April on a platform opposing the annexation by the Amarillo district.

The News learned of the possibility of the annexation attempt several months ago.

At that time, it was reported that a petition was circulating in the area involved in the annexation asking the Amarillo board to annex the land.

The News learned that several land developers were also interested in having the land annexed by Amarillo's school district.

School Supt. Bob Ashworth of Amarillo told The News at that time that the annexation petition was an annual occurrence.

However, the News learned that several Amarillo school board members had contacted members of the county board of school trustees to talk about the proposed annexation.

No petition for the annexation has been presented either board.

The new Amarillo High School campus, scheduled to open next fall, is just a few hundred yards north of the Amarillo-Canyon district line.

Canyon board members announced recently the purchase of a large block of land in the north part of the district for future construction of a high school.

County school trustees become involved in the annexation question if a petition is presented and the two school boards cannot reach agreement on the annexation.

Prior to the meeting with the Amarillo board, Canyon board members are scheduled to have a 7 p.m. dinner at the Amarillo Club.

Following the joint meeting, the Canyon board is expected to discuss payment of bills and to hear a presentation on the custodians and building maintenance in the local system.

$441,000 in disbursements.

That figure is broken down as follows: County Judge office — $15,268; auditor — $7,199; treasurer — $8,101; clerk — $50,735; district clerk — $30,923; district attorney — $45,720; tax assessor — $109,707; sheriff — $118,503; justice of the peace — $24,551; county agent — $11,675; juvenile probation — $15,705.

Commissioners face a heavy agenda Monday when they meet at 1 p.m.

They are expected to discuss a contribution to the summer recreation program sponsored annually by the City of Canyon.

City Manager George Loudder has written a letter to Judge Woody Pond requesting that the county contribute money to finance the program.

City commissioners instructed Loudder to write the letter two weeks ago after reviewing the summer program.

George Blackwell, local insuranceman is expected to discuss the county's fire insurance.

Sheriff Cliff Longest and Mrs. Audrey Bruse, tax assessor, are scheduled to discuss with commissioners new equipment and supplies.

Commissioners are also expected to discuss attending a joint meeting of the Amarillo and Canyon school boards Tuesday night in Amarillo.

Commissioners have been invited by the Amarillo board to attend the meeting, which is expected to center around Amarillo's proposal to annex several sections of land now in the Canyon district into the Amarillo district.

Additional insurance benefits for county employees will also be discussed.

Marriages. . .

charges $5 for a marriage license.

May of 1970 was a good month for marriage licenses, too, with 33 issued.

1972 was a record year for the issuance of marriage licenses, with 247 issued. So far through May, it appears 1973 will be close to that record.

Mrs. Laquitta Polvadore, district clerk, reported 33 divorces were filed during May in the county.

That's a record low for the year so far, down four from the next lowest month of January. Forty-two divorces were filed in April, 48 in March and 45 in February.

The May divorce filing total is well below most months in 1972, also. December 1972 had the fewest divorce filings with 20. In May 1972, 40 divorces were filed.

County clerk records indicate that while a young man's fancy may have turned, it hasn't turned much.

Nine persons were filed on in May for driving while intoxicated. That's not a low for the year. Only 8 DWI cases were filed in January with 10 in February, 12 in March and 10 in April.

Jailer Merle Strickland reports, however, that this "is the slowest spring since I've been here."

Strickland, a deputy here since the early 1950s, said his jail is running about 50 per cent under the capacity it usually has during this time of year.

He said only about 35 occupants have been in the jail in May, significantly fewer than have been residents in the past few years.

"Offense reports are coming in less this spring than they have been, too," he said.

blame for that at the feet of Dr. H.W. Sibley, director of the Texas Animal Health Commission.

Poff said his bill to establish a Green Thumb program in Texas passed both houses of the Legislature, though.

The bill establishes state funding of a work project program for senior citizens, allowing them to make $100 per month to supplement social security payments and to become actively involved in worthwhile projects throughout the state.

"That's the best bill I've ever introduced and probably will be the best I'll ever introduce," Poff said. "It will go a long way to solve some problems."

Poff, who was in Canyon hunting for an apartment or house, said he anticipates no special session this year, although he said one is needed.

"I think we need one for funding of public education which we did nothing about," he said.

After a month or so of rest, Poff plans to begin studying the work of the Constitutional Revision Commission and preparing for another lengthy stint sitting as a member of the constitutional convention.

The legislature is to sit as constitutional convention beginning next January following the initial study by the revision commission.

Poff said the stint on the convention could be troublesome and could prove less than adequate for the state since the legislators will be asked to work on the constitution during a period of time when they will be campaigning for re-election back home in their districts.

"I'm not so sure that's good," he said.

Poff said he favors the approach called for in rewriting the current state constitution since he believes that those who write the new document must be politically attuned to the state.

He said, though, he anticipates the final document will not differ much from the current constitution.

can be let on the project, several small items must be submitted the Texas Health Department for approval. Among the items are a contract with West Texas State University on the land upon which the hospital will be located; a letter of approval from the Panhandle Regional Planning Commission and other paper work.

The paper work must also be completed for application for Hill-Burton funding of the project.

Administrator Ray Grimes said the board is keeping open the possibility that Hill-Burton funds may be accepted to finance one-half the cost.

Revenue bonds have already been alloted to finance the other half of the project.

Currently, the board has received what they consider an excellent bond rating from one New York City rating company and are awaiting word on another company's rating.

The board is considering either Hill-Burton funds or bonds for $800,000 of the project costs.

Wind. . .

The wind is a non-depletable and unpolluting resource.

But, use of the wind for power has some related and so far unanswered problems.

"One is that it has a low density like solar energy," Nelson said. "To get enough energy you've got to build a number of plants or one big system. You've got to cover a lot of area and the wind doesn't blow all the time.

"The second is the storage problem."

Although both problems could be solved right now, the question is basically one of economics, Nelson said.

Capturing the wind and storing the energy it produces would cost much more today than energy which is currently available though seemingly in short supply.

That's why the use of wind as an energy source is simply one alternative scientists are eyeing to avert an energy disaster in this country.

"It can be done, but it's a question of economics," he said. "If you can't compete with the local power company then they're not going to build them."

Nelson said some scientists are studying the possibility of individualized wind power units for homes. Others are examining the possibility of large wind capturing systems to provide energy for whole cities or industries.

For Nelson and Gilmore, their study is much more basic.

For the past several months, they have been monitoring wind speeds, directions, and other characteristics to provide the basic information which would be needed to determine if wind conversion systems would be feasible in this part of the country.

Through their initial studies they have determined through calculations of the wind south of Canyon that by using a 32-foot wheel and placing a value of two cents per killowatt hour on the energy created, the wind would create about $800 worth of electricity per year.

Nelson said he speculates the cost for that $800 worth of energy would be about $3000. But, much of that cost would be one-time cost and operating cost of a windmill would decrease after the initial investment.

"If it's economically feasible there'll be a future and with the way things are going we think there'll be a future for wind energy," he said.

To continue their research, Nelson and Gilmore have applied to the National Science Foundation for a two-year grant. No word has yet been received on the application.

federal government. When he assumed the presidency of the Iowa association, he said, the state appropriation to private colleges was $4 million. This year, the legislature appropriated $12 million to private colleges.

Dr. Watkins is a native of Cape Garadeau, Missouri and married Mary Caudle Watkins in 1949.

He received his bachelor of science degree in education from Southeast Missouri State College in 1949 and his masters degree in speech from the University of Wisconsin in 1951.

He took his PhD. in speech at the University of Wisconsin in 1954 and his doctoral dissertation was on The Rhetorical Theory and Criticism of Lord Brougham.

His minor was law.

Dr. Watkins has been president of the Iowa association since 1969. Prior to that time, he was executive vice president and professor of speech at Idaho State University.

Throughout his years in universities he has taught speech and English. He was also a high school teacher of speech and English.

The search for a new president for West Texas State began eight months ago, and was first announced in The News when it learned that regents had formed a secret committee to screen applicants.

Later the committee's existence was made public and the committee screened resumes from more than 200 candidates.

From a list of about a dozen, the regents then eliminated the field to the four who were in final contention.

City In Quandry Over Weeds On Private Property Here

Weeds on unoccupied personal property in Canyon are creating an itchy problem at City Hall.

Section 12-41 of the Canyon Code states that "it shall be unlawful for any person having supervision or control of any lot, tract, parcel of land or portion thereof, occupied or unoccupied within the corporate limits of the city to suffer or permit grass, weeds or any plant that is not cultivated to grow to greater lengths than 12 inches in average or grow in rank profusion" either on the premises or along the sidewalk or adjacent street.

According to the Code, if after 10 days of notification by the city of the violation, the delinquent property-owner does not comply, the city "may enter upon such premises and may do such work necessary or cause the same to be done" in order that the premises be in compliance with the code.

The trouble is, according to Canyon Code Enforcement Officer Blakley Fargason, the city doesn't want to have to go in and cut the weeds. He is hoping that people will want to cooperate with the city in making Canyon a "clean and well cared for community."

"Our biggest problem is weeds on unoccupied property whose owner either resides outside Canyon or within the city. People living out-of-town don't know what's going on since they can't see the weeds."

He says there have been very few instances of over-grown weed problems on occupied Canyon property.

The City is now following the procedure of notifying property-owners of their weed violations through letter. No coercive action has been considered, he says, and the letters take the form of a request for cooperation.

Follow-ups on property-owners duly notified of their violation have shown that "friendly persuasion" has been working pretty well. Fargason said that several notified owners have now come into compliance with the code.

Fargason said the job of weed removal for the city would be "too expensive" and says he hopes that city action won't be necessary. He added the city will go in and cut the weeds if "forced to do so."

Fargason said that anyone with lots in violation of the code may contact him for information on persons available for weed removal work. He added that those interested in doing such work who have the necessary equipment may also notify him at City Hall.

WT Tennis Camp Starts

The first of three West Texas Tennis Camp sessions opens today on the West Texas State University campus and runs through Saturday.

The second session will be June 24-30 and the third session starts July 29 and continues through Aug. 4.

West Texas State University tennis coach David Kent and Amarillo High School tennis coach Roland Ingram are the camp directors. They are assisted by other area tennis coaches and collegiate players.

The camp, which is for persons between nine and 17 years of age, was started four years ago by Kent.

Campers for each session will receive lectures, take part in drills and play tennis during the week-long events.

There are 113 campers enrolled for the first session and the other two sessions are also filled.

New Officers Are Installed

New officers of Alpha Theta Delta chapter of Beta Sigma Phi were installed recently in the home of Mrs. Henry Lewis, 707 Taylor Lane.

Mrs. Ray Grimes, outgoing president, installed new president Mrs. Judy Hill; new vice president Mrs. Theresa Lewis; new recording secretary Mrs. Naja Maxwell; new treasurer, Mrs. Mary Alice Hines; and new chapter advisor Mrs. Lucille Robinson.

Officers installed in absence were Mrs. Cindy Stevenson, corresponding secretary, Mrs. Jeannie Kuhlman, chapter advisor and Mrs. Veda White, sponsor.

Following the installation ceremonies, Secret Beta Buddies for the past year were revealed and gifts were exchanged. The members also enjoyed a salad supper.

Mrs. Grimes conducted the regular business session and announced that the chapter picnic will be held June 22.

Mrs. Grimes presented the evening's program, "The Beautiful," and her presentation was awarded program of the year.

Attending the meeting were Mmes. Conway, Grimes, Hill, Hines, Henry Lewis, Mike Lewis, Maxwell and Robinson.

Water Manager Is Certified

The city's water and sewer plant manager, Robert Rogers, has received the Texas Department of Health's certificate of competency in wastewater treatment.

Rogers underwent an extensive training course sponsored by the Texas Water Utilities Association to receive the certification. The course is designed to teach participants effective ways of producing safe drinking water and treatments to make wastewater into clean streams for public use.

Rogers completed both a formal and a specialized training program.

Cleveland Player Signs With Buffs

Bruce Taylor, an all-city forward from Cleveland, has signed an athletic scholarship agreement with West Texas State University to play basketball.

The 6-6, 190-pounder was a two-year standout at St. Joseph High School for coach Robert Straub.

Taylor was the Most Valuable Player for two years at St. Joseph. He was the second leading scorer and leading rebounder his junior season for a 15-5 club — hitting 14 points per game and averaging 10 rebounds.

During his senior year he scored 17 points per game to again rank as the team's second leading scorer and averaged 13 rebounds per game to lead the team to a 20-2 record. He collected 25 rebounds in one game to set a school single game record.

Taylor was named to the All-Crown Conference team and also to the city all-star team. He was named the Most Valuable Player in the Sectional Tournament.

Earlier this spring he played in the Sharon, Pa., All-Star Tournament and is scheduled to play in the All-American All-Star Tournament at Coyahoga Falls, Ohio.

In addition to the single game rebounding record he set, Taylor also established a new season shooting percentage high for field goals — hitting 61 per cent of his shots. He also shot 75 per cent at the free throw line.

"Bruce was a tremendous player to work with as he is such a fine person," said Straub. "He does an exceptional job on defense and is able to shoot from a nice range. He sees the open man well with his passing and is able to put the ball on the floor to drive."
